The Times' Daily Short Story.

The Key to a Fortune E

John Nettleton was an inventor. He invented a number of small devices for various purposes, but none of them turned out to be of value, or, if they did, some one who furnished the means to put them on the market reaped the benefit. Nettleton's wife and a girl and what had been done once could be Dozens of Men Said to Have Been Vicshe had adopted stood by him through done again. Often late at night the all his disappointments. and drifted away from home. Peter knew enough of such matters to feel sure that if his father had invented means of overcoming the defect he had made a model of the contrivance. He and Maggie hunted all over the house for such a model. Every closet was ransacked, spaces under the eaves of the roof, cellar and workshop, to no purpose. The model was not to be found.

The pet scheme of John Nettleton's life was a machine for saving labor, the object of which he alone understood. While thus engaged he dreamed at night of great fortunes secured, or that some one was destroying his model just as he had perfected it. Often his wife would awaken him when he was struggling in nightmare. But before he accomplished his object she died, leaving no one but Maggie Thorpe, her adopted daughter, to care for him. She remained with him and was a perpetual bow of promise.

It was several years after his wife's death before Nettleton struck the fundamental idea of his machine. But on applying it he found that a device was necessary to overcome a defect which, though trifling in itself, rendered the machine useless. He worked three years over this and overcame it. Then he made a model of his machine, and a separate model of his contrivance to overcome the defect. He had been so swindled by persons appropriating his inventions that he chose to keep a key to this one, which would alone unlock the secret. The model of the machine he kept in his workroom. The model of the contrivance he kept no one knew

But with all his precaution John Nettleton never reaped the benefit of his invention. Death took him away so suddenly that he had no time to reveal to any one where he kept the model he called his key model. Peter was called home to bury his father and found nothing to represent an inheritance except a will bequeathing the little house and the invention to Maggie Thorpe. Peter saw the model of the machine, and, being a machinist, was delighted with it; but, setting it in motion, he soon saw the defect. It

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription,

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription,

Is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse because of the uncertainty as to their harmless character, but is a medicine of anown composition, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, the point English, on every bottle wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its makeup. The "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Plerce is in fact the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and allments, sold through druggists, that does not contain alcohol and that too in large quantities. Furthermore, it is the only medicine for woman's special diseases, the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the aliments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of some of these endorsements will be sent to any address, postpaid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Don't forget that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for woman's weaknesses and delicate aliments, is not a patent or secret medicine, being the "Favorite Prescription" of a regularly educated and graduated physician, engaged in the practice of his chosen specially—that of diseases of women—that its ingredients are printed in plain English on every bottle-wrapper; that it is the only medicine especially designed for the cure of woman's diseases that contains no alcohol, and the only one that has a professional endorsement worth more than all the so-called "testimonials" ever published for other medicines. Send for these endorsement as above. They are free for the asking.
